

Character Profile

Name: Paul Glazer—Private Investigator

Physical

Paul is 6'1" at 200 pounds with blonde hair, broad shoulders and an easy smile. He lived in Naples, Florida as a child but moved to San Francisco when his father's company transferred him. He is 35 years old and stays fit by working out regularly.

Role

Paul works for a California bay area law firm. His job is to uncover facts needed to prosecute a case. He initially plays the role of antagonist to Kyle and Kyle's company, however many strange events change his role as the story unfolds.

Problems & Challenges

Paul wants to leave the San Francisco area and return to Florida where the cost of living is more reasonable and the social/environmental issues Californians struggles with do not exist.

He fell in love with a school teacher and planned to marry, until tragedy struck. He still suffers from the loss of that relationship.

Accomplishments

He served in the U.S. Army in a garrison position at the Presidio of Monterey, the Army base that teaches foreign languages to soldiers. During the terror attack on the Presidio in 2021, Paul prevented the death of seventeen soldiers by neutralizing two terrorists before their suicide vests detonated. He received the third highest military combat decoration, the Silver Star.

Following his military service, he enrolled at San Francisco State University where he earned a Bachelor degree in Criminal Justice. He obtained a license to become a private investigator, and has been instrumental in providing information that has allowed his law firm to win many cases. The partners at the firm value him and keep him on a retainer that allows him to live well.

Behaviors, Motivations, Traits

He's a man, and that XY chromosome sometimes interferes with his better judgment when dealing with women. His lack of judgment has challenged him in the past, and current events now seem to be challenging him again.

He's got a millennial mindset in that he's driven by wanting to find meaning in the work he does. The law firm he works for handles cases that involve positive social value. He enjoys doing research and under-cover work to unearth facts and support a case that improves life and society in some fashion.

Paul is task-oriented. When he takes on a case he focuses entirely on finishing the assignment on time and providing the information the firm needs.

He is a romantic. He enjoys the company of women and goes out of his way to express his care and concern for women.

He is a good listener, not prone to "solving problems" when women express their concerns to him. He's refrains from making the other person "wrong" in their view of a situation.

He values honesty and directness in human relations. He is sometimes honest to a fault, which can cause pain to others.

What Others Think of Him

His employers consider him reliable, able to take on any assignment and get the job done.

His peers perceive him as physically and mentally strong; a friend you can rely on in a pinch.

Women see him as a "hunk;" well-muscled, tanned and attractive.